Executive Summary:-

Pret A Manger is a British brand that will be launched in December. However, in Pakistan, it will be called Pretza rather than Pret a Manger. Pretza will sell coffee and meals that will be completely tailored to the tastes of Pakistan. The target market is those aged 16 to 35, who are the driving force behind cafe culture in Pakistan. Pretza used demographic and psychographic segmentation to establish its target market, which consists of youthful, urban, and digitally active consumers. Pretza's goals and objectives include increasing curiosity and awareness, spreading positive word of mouth, and increasing foot traffic to the cafe. The IMC will follow the AIDA model framework, with attention and interest being employed specifically for this IMC as a teaser, which will be distributed via billboards and influencer marketing. Desire and action are automatically generated when consumers see the video commercial and try Pretza for the first time at Soulfest prior to its introduction. This IMC's money is split across four platforms: billboards, influencers, video advertising, and event sponsorship at Soulfest. The market gap for Pretza is that there are very few international cafes that have fully conformed to Pakistani culture. Pretza will let Pakistan feel at home while also incorporating its foreign roots.

Introduction:-

Pret a Manger will launch in Pakistan as "Pretza". This name not only symbolizes the Pret brand identity, but it also conveys a regional feel because Pret is a French term that indicates ready to eat, and "za" is derived from a Pakistani word known as "Taaza", which means fresh. According to Statista, Pakistan's coffee business is rapidly rising, with a current growth rate of 7.2 percent projected for 2025-2029. (statista, no date). As a result, Pretza has fully adapted its product. The initial items were croissants, salad bowls, and sandwiches, but the entire menu has been modified to suit the tastes of Pakistanis. Pretza will, however, include a London element; the coffee menu will include a product named after London called "LNDN Brew". This will differentiate Pretza from its fierce competition. Pretza will fit well with demographics of Pakistan specially, the young generation as it is something new and aesthetically pleasing.

Environmental Analysis: -

PESTEL Analysis:-

- Political:- Pakistan's political environment is unstable; although the prime minister is the head of state, no prime minister has ever completed their five-year term. This is a drawback for Pretza because policies, such as import taxes or Pretza's inability to send its profits back to its home country, can change at any time when a new administration takes office. As study says, Pakistan has experienced significant levels of political instability since its founding because of frequent, erratic changes in leadership. All policies must be consistent. Most economic sectors are negatively impacted by political instability (Impact of political instability on international investment and trade in Pakistan, 2020)
- Economical: - Pakistan has struggled with a persistent and worrying issue of inflation during the last few decades (Stylianou, Nasir and Waqas, 2024). This means that production costs for Pretza, such as ingredients, will rise, and import charges will be imposed, posing further challenges for Pretza because its fundamental ingredient, coffee beans, will appear pricey. Consumer purchasing power would fall, limiting Pretza's ability to raise prices owing to increased competition.
- Social: - Pretza will act strategically in this market, which is expanding. The Pakistani population has a social tendency of eating out, particularly generation Z, whose hangout spots are these cafes, demonstrating that entering Pakistan could be good for business. They are also eager to visit new locales, as Pretza will be aggressively pushed through influencers and billboards. Most individuals reported daily social eating with friends. Going to different cafés and eateries. Eating high-calorie foods in social settings. (Sadia et al., 2021)
- Technological: - Pakistan has seen an increase in technology, especially online banking some of the famous apps are JazzCash, EasyPaisa or even QR codes. Even some cafes have stopped printing out menus and use QR codes instead. Pretza can use online banking while being sustainable. Apps like Food panda, Cheetay are heavily used by individuals in Pakistan. The rapid growth of information technology and the Internet has led to a global shift toward digital payment methods. (Saadullah et al., 2024)
- Environmental: - Pakistan is well-known for its landmark beauty; tourism increases throughout different seasons; yet, due to economic problems, Pakistan does not receive as many tourists as it should. Another concern is that Lahore's air is no longer as clean as it once was due to high pollution levels. Due to this reason, the government has begun to impose restrictions on specific sectors, such as cafes, which are not permitted to open after 10 p.m. due to high smog. Pretza will be significantly impacted by this. In the winter, Lahore has consistently led the daily rankings of the world's most polluted city. (Kamal, Patras, and Forman Christian College Lahore, 2025)

- Legal: - Pretza would have to adhere to food and hygiene safety (PFA) requirements, and halal certification is also required to operate in Pakistan. Because Pretza will be importing coffee beans, they must pass through customs and obtain certificates.

Market Analysis: -

- Market Growth Rate: - According to Statista, Pakistan's coffee business is fast expanding, with a current growth rate of 7.2 percent between 2025 and 2029.(Statista, no date) This demonstrates that the Pakistani market is expanding, not contracting. From this, we can conclude that Pretza is entering a growing market that has the potential to be successful provided its methods are tailored to Pakistan.
- Market Share: - After a thorough investigation, market share was not available; perhaps this is because these sectors are not well watched. However, it was discovered that packaged coffee, such as Nestle instant coffee, generated a respectable amount of income; even from this point, it can be concluded that coffee has a large market share. These businesses provide the majority of the nation's packaged and instant coffee. Renub adds that the coffee market in Pakistan was valued at USD 0.436 billion in 2023 and is projected to reach USD 0.675 billion.(Pakistan Coffee Market Analysis Forecast Report 2025-2033, no date)
- Market Size & Market Trends: According to Statista, in 2025 all types of coffee be it instant or home made or cafe consumption market share is US$ 29.96 million in 2025 while the market size where only cafe or coffee shops market share accounted for US$17.48 million (Statista, no date). According to these figures, people prefer real cafes over homemade or instant coffee, suggesting that, if we only look at the numbers, Pretza Cafe may be well-liked by Pakistanis.

Porter 5 Five Forces: -

Porter's Five Forces are summarized in the diagram below:

Threat of Substitutes High	Bargaining Power of Supplier Medium	Bargaining Power of Buyers HIGH	Rivalry among Existing Competitors HIGH	Threat of New Entrants Mid-High
Every year, a new coffee or cafe debuts in Lahore Tea is an indispensable part of their life ... tea is on the same level as diet (Bowen and Hussain, 2024). Drinking tea from a tea stall (Daba) is a longstanding practice in Pakis-	Coffee beans are imported, therefore coffee suppliers have more influence over the brand. Ingredients for food can be purchased locally due to the large number of small merchants.	Buyers have strong bargaining power because there are so many coffee shop selections. The cost and difficulty of switching are minimal.	Intense competition between Tim Hortons, Gloria Jeans, and Third Culture. There is a lot of indirect rivalry from cafés like Butlers Chocolate Cafe.	Because rent or a lease is so expensive, not everyone can afford it. Pretza's technique will be difficult to replicate because it has an impact on the country of origin.

Competitive Analysis:-

Pretza faces strong competition, both direct and indirect. However, the main competitors are Tim Hortons, Costa, and any international company that follows the same strategy as Pretza. However, no one has done as much localization as Pretza has. Other indirect competitors include Rina's Kitchenette and Butlers Chocolate Cafe, both of which have a premium feel to them, but neither has an international vibe to Pretza, as Pretza promotes its London heritage in its marketing.

Customer Analysis:-

- Who?:- Millennials and members of Generation Z between the ages of 16 and 35 make up Pretza's audience. They were selected because they often go to cafes, keep up with social media trends, and require a place to hang out after work or university. They are also the segments that are significantly influenced by aesthetics and social media posting. Generation Z is commonly regarded as the most powerful consumer group, owing to its high presence on digital platforms and ability to affect market trends. (Wang and Song, 2025)
- What?:- Pretza's goods would consist of a chicken tikka sandwich with karak chai (tea). Pretza's target demographic is most likely heavy users who visit the café at least three times each week to receive their signature drink, such as iced coffee. Pretza naturally encourages complementary items because it not only serves coffee but also a wide selection of cuisine.

- Where?:- Products will be purchased directly from the café for the first several months in order to promote foot traffic in our store design. Products will be sold in two locations: Gulberg and Defence Phase 5. After two or three months, Pretza will either offer delivery on its own or cooperate with delivery firms such as Foodpanda or Cheetay.
- When?:- Pretza's items are purchased in the morning, while employees and students are on their way to work or school. Afternoon purchases may include those who see Pretza as a hangout spot or a work break. Coffee is in demand throughout the year, thus it is not seasonal. Pretza made its debut during Pakistan's iconic event, Soulfest, before being formally created. Other promotional efforts included Instagram influencers, Tiktok, and others. Time is important in the context of Pretza; in the morning, customers want everything done quickly, whereas in the evenings, there are generally social events.
- Why (and how):- Pretza's offerings include freshly prepared cuisine, coffee beans that are not available locally, and things directly from London. Pretza comes into the café category, although competitors such as Tim Horton offer light meals. Pretza provides a range of healthy services with a Pakistani twist. Competitors offer junk meals, however Pretza offers healthier options with a high protein content, such as the hunting beef sandwich.
- Why not?:- One of the reasons could be that competitors offer online services, whilst Pretza does not for a few months. Many individuals still choose local food over burgers or sandwiches. Tim Hortons, for example, offers meal discounts such as purchase one drink, get one free donut, which is one of the reasons why some customers prefer Tim Hortons over Pretza. Our target market enjoys trying new things, thus there is a high chance of converting non-users into users.

SWOT Analysis: -

Aims and Objectives:

Pretza IMC's major goal is to generate interest, hype, and begin product trials before the actual launch.

Our target demographic ranges from 16 to 35 years old and was chosen because it represents two generations: Generation Z and Millennials. According to environmental studies, these two generations introduced cafe culture to Pakistan. Both of these generations utilize social media extensively, particularly Instagram and Tiktok. Both of these generations are interested in trying out new and visually appealing eateries. The reason for using Soulfest is that both generations will be present. Pretza's key theme is a blend of two messages: it aims to connect to its roots by using the country of origin. This will give Pretza a more premium appearance. Pretza's smart objectives are:

1. Increase brand awareness by at least 10% by the end of November.
2. Pretza's influencer-led teasers should generate 10% of interaction.

3. Distribute at least 1500 samples during Soulfest in November, and increase word-of-mouth marketing.
4. Pretza expects to reach 1500 store visitors in its second month of operation.

STP(Segmentation, Targeting, Positioning):-

Segmentation:

Pretza will segment through demographics and psychographics. If we define through demographics from 16 to 35 which will include generation Z and millennial from where the cafe culture arose from, generation Z in South Asia Food consumption trends is being transformed by a combination of traditional and contemporary factors. More receptive to tasting different cuisines and experimenting with new nutritional patterns (Hossain et al., 2024). Pretza will also use psychographic segmentation; its segment would be those who not only enjoy premium food but also the premium ambiance behind it.

Target:

Pretza will target consumers in the 16–35 age range. An examination of the environment and the market led to the selection of this group as the most desirable. This group has a significant impact on the $17.48 million cafe market. They frequently engage with digital information and enjoy having coffee outside the house. Their expectations for affordable, excellent services, prompt catering, and tasty flavors are met by Pretza's value offer.

Positioning: -

Pretza will promote itself as a luxury brand, viewed as a cafe for healthy eating because the menu is entirely Pakistani yet the products are fresh and nutritious. Pretza will also draw on its London history, since the London Brew (Appendix A) is the most premium and expensive beverage Pretza will offer.

4P's of Marketing: -

Product:-

Pret A Manger has thoroughly adapted to Pakistan's culture. According to the following piece, "This argument for adapting to local settings also highlights the disadvantages of standardizing marketing tactics, which require focusing on items rather than consumers and competition." (Rao-Nicholson, Khan, 2017). The updated menu in Appendix A demonstrates full embrace of Pakistani culture by introducing new products not found on Pret's official menu, such as

"Chicken Tikka Sandwich", "Smash Beef Burger", and "Peri Peri Chicken Wrap". The fundamental reason for adaptation is that UK tastes differ significantly from those of Pakistan. Pretza will be related to its roots because it also sells a premium beverage known as "LNDN Brew," which is officially connected to London, giving its customers the impression that they are drinking from London.

Price: -

Pretza established its prices based on those of its rivals, such as Tim Hortons, Costa, Third Culture, and so on. In the instance of Pretza, competitive pricing was employed due to intense competition. Another pricing strategy that was applied to Pretza was “value-based pricing”. If you refer to Appendix A, you will notice that “LDN Brew” is the most expensive one compared to the others. The idea behind this is to give customers the impression that they are genuinely drinking coffee from London. In one case, value-based pricing and competitive pricing go hand in hand when it comes to food prices. Since Pretza wants to be seen as more than just a coffee shop, it also wants to be seen as a cafe, therefore indirect competitors like "Rina's Kitchenette" were taken into consideration. As a result, the pricing is slightly higher than those of its direct competitors. Because Pretza wanted customers to believe that even though the food was of the highest quality, the pricing was higher than the third culture but lower than Rinas.

Place: -

Pretza will be located in two areas which is where the target audience can be found. First place is DHA phase 5 and the other is Gulberg. There were two reasons as to why DHA was chosen; it is the place where people go to receive high-quality food as all premium brands are found there. The next reason happens to be the most important reason; this is where generation z is found as many schools are here and two famous universities are located in DHA. This will be seen as a profitable place to open its first store. Gulberg was chosen as a lot of cafes are there and can be seen as a food hub, it is also in the center of Lahore meaning it will be easy to reach. This is further affirmed, “The majority of premium cafés, including Rina's Kitchenette, Café Aylanto, Arcadian Café, NOVU, and London Courtyard, are concentrated in the affluent neighborhoods of DHA and Gulberg, confirming these areas as the city's main café clusters, according to a recent corpus-based study of 55 elite cafés in Lahore.”(Sagheer et al., 2024)

Promotion: -

The Aida model, which stands for Attention, Interest, Desire, and Action, is what Pretza will employ. The company will utilize teaser campaigns to keep its identity a secret from Pakistani consumers. This will further be explained when the IMC strategy is discussed.

IMC strategy: -

Pretza will follow the Aida model of Attention, Interest, Desire, and Action. The first phase will follow Attention and Interest.

The first IMC tool that Pretza will implement is billboards. Essentially, the arrival of Pret a Manger in Pakistan will be announced through teaser advertising rather than a formal announcement. The teaser advertisement is intended to spark people's interest. This type of stimulation is effective because it creates an information gap and encourages the consumer to fill it (Mahmoud, Hassan & Sobhy, 2025). Billboards will be deployed around Lahore, particularly in locations such as Defence, Gulberg, and Johar Town. Appendix B includes one example of a billboard that Pretza will use. This will attract customer attention because all of these billboards will be situated around eye level. For example, the Defence Phase 1 Bridge will have many billboards put directly against eye level. Pretza's other tactic will be to change the positions or content of these billboards on an ongoing basis. Pretza will gradually announce that it is going to Pakistan, therefore teaser billboards will be utilized once a week or every two weeks. People exert less cognitive effort when they become used to repeated stimuli. (Amaral and Redden, 2024)

The second IMC tool will be digital marketing, which will include Instagram, TikTok, and Facebook, but Instagram will be mostly used. Pretza's target market is Generation Z and Millennials, who can only be reached through social media. Pretza has not yet officially started in Pakistan, thus they will not have their own Instagram accounts, so the business will rely on influencer marketing. Influencers in several disciplines have stable and identifiable fan bases. Screening ensures that the brand reaches its intended audience and raises awareness (Wu, 2022b). Food influencers will be used by Pretza such as Mahnoor Saad or Ayman Ahmad. This will satisfy the interest component of the Aida model. Billboards first drew attention, and now influencers are spreading the word. Pretza's target demographic will instantly believe that something big is coming to Lahore.

The third IMC tool that will be used is advertising, this where Pretza will end the tease and will officially announce its opening. A humorous ad will be published, both on television and on social media. The television ad will be published at the peak hour, for example at 8 pm. This is the time where popular shows are on, hence publishing at this time will cause Pretza to achieve higher reach. Television advertising was chosen because some millennials still prefer television to social media. Cricket is a popular sport on television, thus Pretza will air their new ad on sports channels. The advertisement will come under humor, because humorous advertising captures customers' attention and makes the message clear, thereby influencing their purchasing decision. (Ali et al., 2024) Now that Pret a manager has formally announced Pretza, all teaser efforts will come to an end. Pretza will now create a social media profile where it will tantalize its cuisine and provide behind-the-scenes glimpses into the preparations for welcoming Lahore residents.

The fourth IMC tool is events and sponsorship, in November or December Pakistan's biggest musical event is held which lasts for three days. Pretza too will be present there with limited options, but their most premium product will be available which is known as London Brew. But this is all before they open their doors to the public. The main reason behind this is to achieve word of mouth even before the store opens, because consumers seek trusted community feedback on products. Word-of-mouth has a significant impact on the development of a company's image (Taufik et al., 2022). When their target demographic takes the first drink and enjoys it, they will spread the word all over. Not only will they be present for the opening week, but they may also bring their loved ones.

Are the tools aligned together?

While all of the instruments adhered to the AIDA framework, Pretza primarily used attention and interest. All of them were effective; the first two methods were merely employed to generate talk about what is happening; billboards attracted attention because each one had unique content and timings. The element of interest was created by using digital media to engage with its target demographic through some of the well-known food influencers. Other aspects were immediately incorporated into the IMC even though the goal was to employ attention and interest. The hilarious advertisement sparked desire after viewers saw all the teaser advertisements and ultimately received the answers to their questions. Additionally, action was used when Pretza distributed samples to Soulfest attendees. This makes the integration of IMC, which used the entire Aida concept. This integrated strategy is in line with studies that demonstrate how many communication stimuli, such e-WOM and viral marketing, combine to greatly affect customer interest and travel decisions. (Taufik et al., 2022)

Evaluation Plan: -

1. Billboards: The first IMC instrument utilized was the billboard, which was positioned throughout Lahore at eye level for maximum visibility. Reach (the number of people who saw it) and whether or not people remembered the billboard were the instruments used to assess these. Both of these will assist the brand in assessing the goals they established.
2. Digital Media: Digital media made particular use of influencers. Did people view your content? This was one of the questions that needed to be addressed. Did they interact with the material? Was there any hype? Was it discussed? Likes, shares, comments, and the usage of hashtags that alluded to the Pretza debut were the instruments utilized to evaluate these.
3. TV + Digital Advertisement: In this advertisement, we transition from teaser marketing to the official announcement of Pretza's opening. The digital advertisement will be evaluated to see if viewers scroll through it or if the channel was switched. The Click Through Rate will be used to determine how many individuals clicked on the advertisement, indicating whether or not the audience was interested enough to learn more.
4. Events & Sponsorship: Pretza's taste testing will take place at Soul fest, with the primary goal of spreading the word. The number of samples distributed to consumers. This can be measured after the event, rather than at its start. Pretza will watch if footfall increases as word-of-mouth spreads.
